HISTORY OF PRESENT ILLNESS

Stanley Downen was a 77-year-old gentleman with advanced dementia. He was admitted to the hospital on 06/01/12 with severe agitation accompanied by belligerent, aggressive, and threatening behavior. He had eloped from the Montana Veterans' Home and was acting in a threatening way in the community. The Columbia Falls police subdued him with a taser. He was subsequently brought to the hospital and admitted to the hospitalist service.

HOSPITAL COURSE

The patient's admitting CT and other studies were unremarkable. He did have bruises and superficial lacerations over his left orbit. Over the ensuing days, multiple attempts were made to achieve behavioral control - including conscientious 1-to-1 nursing and multiple medication trials. Strong efforts were employed to sufficiently stabilize the patient to where he could be transferred to a secure dementia unit. Availability of such a facility was quite limited.

In the meantime, the patient was treated for pneumonia which resolved. He had issues with constipation which were also resolved.

As it was clear that the patient's dementia was progressive and that behavioral control was proving elusive, the patient's power of attorney for health care opted to move him to comfort care status. Thereafter, additional comfort measures were applied. The patient was kept comfortable and eventually settled and calmed down. Shortly thereafter, he showed signs of diminished respirations. At 5:30 this morning, the patient died comfortably in the presence of family members.
